1 - Overview

Microsoft Teams is the communication suite that is part of the Microsoft Cloud offering. For most businesses, it has become the default unified communication platform for collaboration. Unlike non-commercial and casual communication platforms, the sensitivity of information being transferred over and residing in Microsoft Teams makes it a critical part of the IT infrastructure that should be managed and maintained.

The empowering nature of Microsoft Teams, where individual users can create new Teams and Channels, leads to organic sprawl that bypasses traditional change control processes. This report is designed to document the current status of the entire Microsoft Teams configuration for the organization and highlight potential risks.

2 - Teams Summary

This section provides a listing of all Teams along with their description, web URL, and archiving configuration. The listing should be used both for inventory purposes and periodic reviews of the Teams in the organization. Duplicate Teams and those that are no longer needed should be archived to reduce security risks and control organic sprawl.

3 - Teams Detail

The following sections list each Team and its configuration settings. Each Team has one or more Owners who create and manage the Team. Teams conversations are grouped into Channels, and each Channel has one or more Tabs. Tabs, beyond the normal chat tab, can be added that contain specific information and in some cases represent integrations to third party applications.

Settings for Members, Guests, Messaging, as well as Fun elements of Teams are also listed. A review of settings per Team should be done periodically to ensure they are in line with the organization's communication and IT policies.
